

Education Abroad in GLOBAL SECURITY & JUSTICE

Benefits of International Experience

Studying abroad will enrich your understanding of key issues regarding Global Security and Justice (GSSJ) whether by living in and gaining first-hand knowledge of a post-conflict country, or studying at a university with a well-respected department in a related field such as peace & conflict studies. Many education abroad programs offer opportunities to conduct research in the field, or participate in an internship through a variety of settings, allowing you to expand your professional network, gain practical experience in an international setting and develop skills for success in the global workplace.

Student Testimonials

I had an amazing time studying abroad in Geneva, Switzerland. The city is amazing and diverse, and I loved studying at a university with students from all over the world. The best part of my experience was interning at the International Institute of Peace, Justice and Human Rights, and participating in the 2015 Human Rights Council of the United Nations. I would recommend studying in Geneva to anybody interested in global politics and diplomacy, or anyone interested in engaging and learning from an amazing international community. - Brianna Lambert, Global Studies - Security and Justice major, Kent University in Geneva

Academic and Timing Considerations

- There is a program for every budget! Speak with an education abroad advisor to learn about your options.
- Financial aid is portable. If you receive any kind of financial aid or use a program such as VPEP, make sure to tell your advisor early on in your planning.
- Scholarship deadlines are often earlier than program applications—research and apply early!
- Use the cost comparison worksheet on the Education Abroad website to compare programs, what is included in each program and what meets your budget.
